BIG CROWDS
SEE FAIR ON OPENING DAY

A WONDERFUL DISPLAY

Fair is Now In Full Blast—Good Weather Only Needed to Insure Its Success. Bear Country

Not even in the palmy days of the old Rock County Fair was there such a display of fat stock, fine bred horses, such chickens, so large a field of first class race horses as are now on exhibition at the grounds of the Janesville Park association for the second Janesville fair. Every department, from the fine arts department to the merchants and manufacturers' display is crowded with entries. In the stock department

The stock department's present quarters are far too inadequate and tents, extra stalls and hastily constructed pens are made use of. This being children's day, the grounds were packed with youngsters who enjoyed every minute of the performance. They were everywhere even the music of the Moose band was almost drowned by their chatter.

The track was fast and in the two-year-old turf pace the first heat went to Trump out of Sir Waisingham. The A.M. Kiver Patch, Wm. H. and Vera Tramp finishing in the order named. The time was 2:27 1/4.

In the first heat of the 2:30 trot, John Burr was first, with Glenn C. Dolly Deved, Peter Ax, Wilton C. Classman, Capt. Harry, Gerwolla Jay, Eva Bingham, Ray Jolla and Hymie finishing in order named. The time for the heat was 2:21 1/4.

Concession Space Gone.

Confession space was all sold out by 10 o'clock this morning. Secretaries of the fair were busy trying to allow only the more desirable stands and shows to operate on the grounds, sweeping out the entire line of stands and shows to the entrance. Among the attractions for the children were the merry-go-round and Ferris wheel, which were busy from morning till evening. The crowds left the grounds early in the day. Several thousand children spent the afternoon at the fair, a thousand of them coming from the playgrounds, which were closed to allow the youngsters an opportunity to attend.

John Soultman has between twenty-five and thirty police on the grounds to guard the exits and to take care of the large crowds.

During the morning scores of horses were given workouts. George W. Waddell, after racing a mile under saddle, making the quarter in thirty seconds. It is expected this wonderful horse will give an exhibition on Friday.

The Stock Exhibit.

Critics this morning pronounced the stock exhibit the best ever exhibited in a fair in Wisconsin heretofore, barring none. The entries in swine, sheep, goats and lambs were the best in this morning by owners from the surrounding country, in hopes of finding space in the stalls and stables for the exhibition. By the close of the day it was found necessary to erect additional stalls for the third time to take care of the great amount of stock.

In the ladies' building, used for the stock exhibits, the first and second exhibits, at a rate of one hundred and and other articles that are already attracting the undivided attention of the visitors. The large pieces, both being 7 inches in diameter, are exhibited. Mrs. C. E. Harrington of 429 South Main street, has on display one of the most beautiful pieces of needlework by hand, with a cluny lace border and an embroidered center of huge dimensions. The piece is placed by Mrs. Emma Bogardus of Genoa Junction, Wisconsin, and is crocheted entirely by hand. This department is of unusual interest to the women.

Under the Grandstand.

The space under the grandstand is completely filled with attractive and interesting articles. The booths are set-up town merchants. The educational and farm products departments are also displaying their entries here along with the other exhibits. It is well shown by the postoffice of this city and demonstrated by Louis Gage.

Under the grandstand, the displays under the grandstand are as follows:

On the south side, from west to east, are J. M. Boswick and Sons; educational department, W. H. Ashcraft's furniture display, E. D. Bliss of Milton, sewing machines and pianos; Freeman and Burget, pianos; F. Van Covern, Holland furnaces; Kerring-Hall-Marvin Safe company. Another Milwaukee distributor is

TWO MEN SENTENCED TO STATE'S PRISON BY MAXFIELD TODAY

Frank Leonard Gets Three Years
Term for Burglary and James Renaker 8 Months for Attempted Forgery.

Two men were sentenced this morning to the state's prison at Waupun by Judge H. L. Maxfield, making it three men committed to this institution from the local court within the past four days. Frank Leonard, age 22, pleaded guilty to the charge of night time burglary and was sentenced to three years at Green Bay reformatory. District Attorney Durward is making out the commitment papers for Leonard, sent the young man to the Waupun prison because the Green Bay school is overcrowded at the present time and no more inmates will be received.

Leonard, when arraigned, stated that he was intoxicated by the night of his arrest and that he did not know who committed a robbery at the residence of Mrs. Harriet Solle, 434 North Bluff street. Attorney Roger Cunningham made a plea for a merciful sentence and the court granted him a clear record and insofar as known had never been previously arrested. The convicted man came from Danville, Illinois, and after leaving his position as a coal miner set out to find employment elsewhere, making his way by riding on trains as a tramp. After Leonard's account of his life Judge Maxfield made a finding of circumstance more a victim of circumstance than of viciousness. The minimum sentence of three years in Green Bay was imposed, with the court record stating that Leonard is to be transferred from Waupun to Green Bay as soon as possible.

James Renaker, the drug fiend, appeared in court this morning and pleaded guilty to a charge of carrying a dangerous weapon to the amount of $75. Renaker laid the fault of his crime entirely to the morphine habit, and urged that he be committed to some state institution other than Waupun to escape prison stigma. District Attorney Durward in his recommendation of sentence declared that physicians who had examined Renaker pronounced him sane except that he became desperate in his means to obtain morphine. Judge Maxfield told Renaker that he had spent much time in investigating his case and firmly believed that the morphine habit was the real cause of the offense. The court said that the prison authorities in their experience in handling drug fiends found that a cure could not be made in less time than the eighteen months. The term of this length was pronounced by the court upon Renaker, sentence to begin today at noon.

Renaker presented a very good appearance in court, and after the sentence was heartbroken because of having to go to prison. He is thirty-four years of age and previous to the time that he became a slave to drugs was a promising advertising solicitor on several eastern newspapers. He has traveled to South America and is a man of wide experience. The Madison police are interested in the sentence of Renaker because it is said he is wanted in that city on a similar charge. Further investigation shows that Renaker obtained, in some manner, the lodge receipts, pins and letters belonging to William Swensen, Madison real estate dealer, and that Renaker traveled under Swensen's name and used the letters and pins in letter in forging checks. No trace has ever been found of the man supposed to be E. C. Martin, on whom the forged checks were made payable. The two men will be taken to Waupun next Thursday.

GOVERNMENT OPENS SOUTH DAKOTA LAND FOR HOMESTEADING

Belle Fourche Project, Built by Janesville Contractors, Now Being Settled.

Announcement of the fact that the federal government has approved the project in South Dakota for homestead entry, will be of interest to Janesville, as the monster dam in the Belle Fourche River, which creates the reservoir, was constructed by the firm of Hayes Brothers and John W. Jones of this city. The land now available is known as the fourth unit of the project.

From time to time for the past several years small areas have been opened to the public in this section and already there is formed a nucleus for the development of the entire project, which will require several months to complete. The present opening is therefore generally regarded as offering an excellent opportunity for the man who wishes to exercise his homestead right and still obtain a desirable and productive tract of land within a few miles of towns where there are modern advantages, such as schools, churches, stores, telephone service and good markets.

The crop returns of the Belle Fourche project have been very good and an encouraging feature of the trend of its development is the increase in stock and the tendency to have long pointed out the advantages of this project for hog raising and dairying. With recognized markets for merchantable products and the facilities for producing a quality of fine quality, the settlers seem to have heeded this advice and their splendid results are now serving as an impetus for further progress along these lines. Persons who are modern and desirous of engaging in alfalfa culture, hogs and dairying can find nowhere in the west a section which will offer better facilities for specializing along these lines of endeavor.

The government announces that the land itself is free and can be obtained only under the homestead law. Provision is made by the reclamation service for supplying water at actual cost to each settler and after twenty years time is given outright a permanent water right.

CRANBERRY GROWERS HOLD CONVENTION AT CRANMOOR

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)
Cranmoor, Wis., Aug. 10.—Did you ever hear the expression "bustle the cranberry merchant"? You would appreciate its full significance if you could see all of the cranberry merchants in Wisconsin here today, attending the annual meeting of the Wisconsin Cranberry growers' association.

It was once the custom of the people to have cranberries only with the Thanksgiving and Christmas turkey, but this has been broadened until now the fruit is used extensively throughout the winter. President Andrew Seabury of the Association delivered his address today. Plans for marketing the Wisconsin product in eastern states were discussed at today's meeting. A. J. Chaney of New York City explained the eastern market conditions and the possibilities of Wisconsin disposing of her surplus in that region.

MOOSE BAND GAVE FINE CONCERT MONDAY EVENING

On Monday evening the Moose Band gave a concert at Riverview Park to an interested audience. The numbers played were most appropriate and well delivered. The band has shown marked improvement during the present summer and today played at the Children's day at the Janesville Fair. During the morning hours it gave several concerts on down town corners, playing several selections in front of the Gazette office. At the grounds this afternoon they delighted the audience assembled with their concert selections.

NAMED TO SUPERVISE FAIRS IN ALBERTA

Alexander Galbraith Appointed to Important Position in Canadian Province.

Alexander Galbraith, for many years a prominent citizen of Janesville, has been appointed to an important position in Canada, announcement of which is made in the following from a Canadian paper:

It is announced that Alex. Galbraith, formerly of Janesville, has accepted the superintendency of fairs and farmers' institutes in the province of Alberta, Canada. His work includes a series of lectures at the demonstration agricultural schools at Claveston, Olds and Verrillville and at the University of Edmonton; the selection of judges for the provincial and the general direction of institute meetings in the province. A man executive work could not have been found. Conscientious, clear-headed, experienced, and a gentleman in the best sense of that term Mr. Galbraith will be invaluable to the Dominion in its courageous and inspiring endeavor to improve, intensify and redirect agriculture. In live stock affairs on this side of the line Alex. Galbraith has been as highly esteemed as he has been useful.

BELOIT YOUTH REPORTED DROWNED ON EASTLAND WAS NOT IN CHICAGO THAT DAY

The report that Robert McGinley of Beloit, formerly a resident of Janesville, was among the victims of the Eastland disaster in the Chicago river was entirely unfounded according to his mother, Mrs. Harvey Smiley, who was a visitor in this city today. Mrs. Smiley stated that her son, who is employed at the Fairbanks-Morse company's plant at Beloit, had not been away from home for some time and was not in Chicago on the day of the disaster. Confusion evidently arose from the fact that an R. G. McGinley was listed among the missing while the young man in question is R. J. McGinley.

THIS CITY IS MADE NIGHT CONTROL FOR MONSTER AUTO TOUR

Two Hundred and Fifty Milwaukee Business Men and Automobile Dealers Will Boost

Janesville will be the first night control for a big automobile tour of the state, which is planned by 250 Milwaukee business men and automobile dealers in the interest of the state fair and the Milwaukee Automobile show. Announcement of the tour has been sent out to the automobile men throughout the state informing them that the tour will start on August 23 and states that the advance showing of 1916 models will be displayed at the state fair auto show.

The tour will cover more than a thousand miles and will include forty-five of the principal cities, affording a market for automobiles in southern, western and eastern Wisconsin.

Outline of Tour.
The furthest point south to be visited will be Beloit, the furthest western point will be Madison, and Marshfield will be the limit on the north. From 140 to 160 miles will be traveled each day. Stops of from one to two hours will be made in the cities visited to permit inspection of the automobiles and to allow the state fair housing committee time to placard and advertise the state fair.

The tour has been planned and arranged by the runs and tours committee of the Milwaukee Automobile Dealers, Inc., consisting of George W. Browne, Frank J. Edwards, John G. Wollager, Edgar F. Sanger, A. A. Jones, A. J. March and H. B. Bonnell.

Send Out Pathfinder.
All the details of the trip have been completed with the exception of sending out the pathfinder to log the roads over which the tourists will pass. This will be done next week.

The night controls for the tour will be Janesville, Madison, Oshkosh, Grand Rapids and Green Bay and from six to eight cities to be visited each day.

Other cities on the six-day tour that will be visited by the Milwaukee dealers are: Racine, Burlington, Elkhorn, Delavan, Beloit, Ft. Atkinson, Jefferson, Lake Mills, Watertown, Oconomowoc, Whitewater, Edgerton, Columbus, Stouten, Beaver Dam, Waupun, Fond du Lac, Ripon, Berlin, Winneconne, Weyauwega, Waubesa, Amherst, Stevens Point, Marshfield, New London, Neenah-Menasha, Appleton, Kaukauna, De Pere, Kewaunee, Two Rivers, Manitowish, Sheboygan, Plymouth and Port Washington.

MARGUERITE CLARK IN A SPANISH ROLE

Dainty Little Star Is Seen in a Pleasing Photoplay.

It remained for "The Pretty Sister of Jose," the play that provided Maude Adams' first great stage success, to prove finally that Marguerite Clark can portray better than any other actress on the screen, the truest depth of emotion and the most exalted power of love and sacrifice.

With her fascinating dark beauty and charming grace of form and motion, Miss Clark was exceptionally adapted to the role of the dainty, little dark-eyed belle of old Spain. As the exquisite Spanish girl of a thousand moods and whims, who has vowed never to lose her heart, but who, when finally conquered by the handsome Sebastian, loves truly and devotedly, she was utterly superb. The scenic environment of California, where the subject was produced, lent itself faithfully to the atmosphere of the story, and the rapidly changing development of the plot, with its wealth of color and romance, resulted in a thoroughly unusual and picturesque photoplay.

As usual when Marguerite Clark is advertised the Apollo was crowded.

MODERN WARFARE.

Wisconsin has taken the right step in preparing for peace by increasing the armed force of the state following the request of the national government.

Every American expert on military affairs realizes that those who, recalling the War of the Revolution and the Civil war, believe entire dependence can be placed on "citizen soldiery" called to arms and trained after the outbreak of hostilities, fall wholly to take into consideration the complexities of modern warfare as compared with that of the periods referred to. The activities of the present day is as much more complex than that of the Civil war as the modern battleship is more complex than the fighting frigate of those days. Fighting was then done at short range and slight inaccuracies of aim of the cannon of that time were of comparative little importance, while men could be trained to fire them with such accuracy as was required in from sixty to ninety days. But the great cannon of today have a range of eight, ten and twelve miles, and it is easy to perceive how useless and even dangerous such weapons must be in the hands of those who cannot aim them with accuracy—with an accuracy which it requires months and even years of practice to acquire, and which can be acquired only by constant practice combined with natural aptitude. One of our greatest military commanders asserts that the gunners who with apparently deadly accuracy saved the day at Gettysburg could not come within a mile of hitting their objective with one of the great mortars or rifles now being used on the European battlefields, and as practically all charges are made under the protection of artillery, the danger to our own forces of putting such weapons in the hands of inexperienced gunners must be obvious. And yet today, the coast artillery of the United States has just half the number of men necessary to man its defenses and in the event of war would be compelled to depend on 50 per cent of raw recruits.

THE MIGRATORY BIRD LAW.

With the approach of the open season for shooting wild fowl, the United States Department of Agriculture is warning sportsmen that the federal regulation as amended October 1, 1914, will be strictly enforced. Some misunderstanding has arisen from the fact that the various state laws do not always conform to the federal regulations. This is regarded as unfortunate, remarks the official circular, but in such cases the department must insist upon the observance of the federal regulations, which, under the circumstances, take precedence of state laws.

Under the federal regulations the United States is divided into two zones, Zone No. 1, the breeding zone, includes the states of Oregon, Idaho, Colorado, Nebraska, Iowa, Illinois, Ohio, Pennsylvania and New Jersey, and all states north of them. Zone No. 2, the wintering zone, includes all states south of those named.

The regulations prescribe an open season in Wisconsin for water fowl, rails, coots, gallinules, black-breasted and golden plover, jacksnipe and yellow-legs from September 7th to December 1st. Insectivorous birds are protected indefinitely. Band-tailed pigeons, cranes, swans, curlew, small shore birds, and wood ducks protected until September 1, 1918. Rails in Vermont and woodcock in Illinois also protected until 1918. Shooting is prohibited between sunset and sunrise; or at any time on sections of upper Mississippi and Missouri rivers after January 1, 1915.

It has been reported from places in the southern zone, particularly in Louisiana, that sportsmen are indulging in the undertaking by the federal government to interfere with the pursuit of game. In general, however, real sportsmen are in sympathy with efforts to preserve game birds from the extinction which certainly would overtake them within a few years were the greedy activities of pot-hunters to go unchecked.

FIGHTING IT OUT.

Governor Phillips is fighting it out. He does not give in one line of proposed retrenchment just because the "Tax-eaters" have mustered a stronger force than he has and have more munitions of war applied by their "allies," the educational and liquor lobby. Phillips is a man who does not know what it is to retreat. He fights the people's business just as he would fight him for his own individual interests and the state is proud of such a leader. Davies, the democratic recognized Wisconsin leader, let the cat out of the bag a few days ago when he made the statement, "Why La Follette controls the state. He cannot be defeated for re-nomination and re-election." He told in a few words what the people already suspected. Namely, that the democrats and ultra-progressive republicans had combined to defeat the will of the people as personified by the Phillip administration, by defeating all their efforts at tax reduction and then seeking to build from the ruins the altar of La Follette the "savior" of Wisconsin. Just how far this idea will reach is hard to estimate now, but if the will of the people and the temper of the voters can be depended upon it will be repudiated and the "Tax-eaters" will find themselves without a corporal's guard at the next session of the legislature.

FRIDAY JANESVILLE DAY.

When Governor Phillip was invited to come to Janesville to make an address at the Janesville fair he selected Friday, August 13th, the combination of Friday and the thirteenth had no dread for him and he laughingly stated that his best luck had always come on that day. Aside from the fact the governor will be here on Friday, the thirteenth, the fair management has set it aside for Janesville, Edgerton and Whiteside day. The better the day the better the deed and not to be outdone the Janesville merchants have decided to make it a half holiday so all their employees can visit the fair. Make it a howling success and prove that the governor is right and the thirteenth and Friday combination is a mascot, not a Jonah day.

THE DAILY NOVELETTE.

And Then to Bed.
There are some people that even the sleeping car porter feels like giving a wide berth.—Prof. Simp.
The pale, desperate looking man, breathing fast, leaned tremblingly over the counter of Isaac Kelly's pawnshop.

"Give me a revolver!" he quavered. "Any kind, just so it's loaded." As he staggered out, clutching a loaded Riker and Diker repeater, the pawnbroker, out of the side of his mouth, blessed to his assistant: "Harold, follow that guy!" Through the dark, deserted streets Harold, the pawnbroker's assistant, dogged the now resolutely striding figure to a great red brick house labeled "Boarders Accommodated."

"Hah! Out of work—suicide," thought the pawnbroker's assistant, and wondered whether to yell for the police or wait and make a dollar or so by phoning in the tip to a morning paper.

The pale purchaser of the pistol drew a key from his pocket and entered. A few moments later he lighted the gas in the front room and sat down on a trunk, with one leg extended in an odd manner straight out in front of him.

"Now," the pawnbroker's assistant, peering in through the open window, could hear him mutter, "Now, you dastetly slam blanketty asterisk shoelace, we'll see whether you'll come untied!"

There was a loud report, a shower of shoestrings afloat, a cry of exultation, and the pale man kicked off his shoe.

PROMINENT CITIZEN IS CALLED BY DEATH

DENNIS W. HAYES SUCCEUMBS TO
FATAL SEIZURE WHILE MO-
TORING MONDAY EVE-NING.

LONG RESIDENT OF CITY

Has Been Prominent in Business Affairs and Member of Firm That Accomplished Great Results.

Dennis William Hayes, for many years a resident of Janesville, prominent in business and financial affairs, died suddenly last evening while on a motor ride with his son and daughter. He has been in poor health for several years and had retired from active business pursuits. Accompanied by his son, Frank Hayes, and his daughter, Mary D. Hayes, he was on a motor ride when he died. He was 58 years of age.

He complained of suffering from stomach trouble and stepped from the car to walk a few steps, thinking it would relieve him. Suddenly he was overcome by an attack of vertigo he was helped back into the car and taken to the State Institute for the Blind, where died. His wife and daughter were summoned, but the spirit of Mr. Hayes had passed to the world beyond before they arrived.

Dennis W. Hayes was born in Hudson, Columbia county, New York state, on October 15th, 1854. While Wisconsin was a territory, he moved to Oregon, in Dane county, where Hayes grew to manhood and started out for his life's work.

Associated with his brother, the late Charles Hayes, under the firm name of Hayes Brothers, and later as Hayes Bros. & Peters, Dennis Hayes has been a prominent figure in the work of the first of the Chicago drainage canal, the Lockport dam, the famous Belle-Fourche project in the west and the construction of the Rock Island and Chicago river.

Through the Black Hills of the Dakotas stretches a bright steel trail, perhaps the first real important railroad building, undertaken by the Hayes brothers. A large part of the work of the Chicago drainage canal, the Lockport dam, the famous Belle-Fourche project in the west and the construction of the Rock Island and Chicago river.

SIDE TALKS

By RUTH CAMERON

A REAL VACATION.
One of my friends who has three children and does a great deal of her own work in addition to caring for them, has just gone away for a vacation for two weeks. She has left the children at home with her husband and gone off by herself.

Now the husband in question is not her pecked—far from it. The suggestion for the vacation (which is as well as hers) came from him.

She Dreads Getting Ready.
She has been very tired lately. When the first warm days came she almost broke down. Even the approach of the annual summer holiday which she has in the last few years spent with her husband and children at some hotel failed to rally her. She dreaded the task of getting everything ready. It all seemed quite insurmountable in her tired, discouraged condition.

It was then that her husband interposed.

"You're going away and have a vacation all by yourself without a care in the world," he said. "I'm going to stay at home and get acquainted with my children. That will be a change for me and them. You can take the extra money and buy yourself some new clothes and go anywhere you choose."

He Insisted She Go Alone.
"You're going down hill steadily," he said. "You've got to keep your strength. If we go with you, you'll spend a great deal of time keeping the children clean and tidy, especially if we go to some hotel. And then they'll be making demands on your vitality every minute of the day just as children always do. No, sir, you're going alone, and that's all there is to it."

Only A Change In The Scene Of Her Labors.
What to many mothers is simply a change in the scene of their activities is going to be a real vacation. Here's an instance where a mother is going to get what is actually a vacation.

Of course the fatal flaw in many instances would be the man's attitude toward it. Still, even in the husband's case, I don't believe that virtue will be its sole reward.

A rested, rejuvenated wife and mother returning from a real vacation that has accomplished all that a vacation should ought to help make a healthier, happier home atmosphere. And I think that will be the husband's reward.

Household Hints

FRUIT NECTAR.
To one quart of hot water add one cup of sugar and a glass of currant or elderberry jelly. Cook until dissolved; cool and add lemon and orange juice to suit taste.

HANDY CLEANER.
Denatured alcohol is excellent for cleaning purposes, being a good solvent of fats, oils and all kinds of grease. A slight addition of ammonia greatly improves its detergent qualities. It is especially useful for cleaning delicate fabrics, such as laces, silks and the like.

HUCKLEBERRY TOAST.
Wash two cups of huckleberries, add one-half cup of boiling water, mash the berries with a spoon and boil slowly fifteen minutes, adding three tablespoons of sugar. Then mix one tablespoon of cornstarch with a little cold water, add to the berries and boil three minutes. Lay toasted bread on a platter and pour berries over.

TO CLEAN SUMMER FURNITURE.
If your white enamel furniture becomes soiled or discolored it may be quickly and satisfactorily cleaned and restored thus:
Melt one tablespoonful of bicarbonate of soda in one quart of boiling water; when cool, wash the furniture with the solution, using an old flannel cloth for the purpose.
When red or cane seats sag, wash them on both sides with warm soap-suds. Make the under side sticky wet; dry in the air and sun.

SODA WATER.
Take two ounces tartaric acid, juice of one lemon, two pounds white sugar, three pints water; let heat together five minutes. When nearly cold, add (after beating together) whites of three eggs, one-half cup flour, made smooth with a little water, and one ounce wintergreen essence. Mix well, put in glass jar or pint bottles and keep in cool place.
For a drink take two tablespoons of the syrup to two-thirds tumbler cold water, and one-fourth teaspoon soda; stir till creamy with foam, and drink.

FIGHT TILL GERMAN HORDE IS CRUSHED SAY FRENCH WOMEN

War Will Not End Until Invaders are Driven from French Soil, Stand of Soldiers' Wives.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]

Paris, Aug. 10.—"How long will the women of France let this war go on?" Suddenly and without warning I put this question to the wife of a French soldier, a man 43 years old, who has been under the colors since the beginning of the war, a year this week. I deeply surprised the lady with the question when she was most down-hearted. Her husband had just been ordered into the front lines, at one of the hottest parts of the long line, north of Arras; yet her answer was immediate and unhesitating.

"Until the Germans are beaten!" Her voice was low yet it seemed to fill the air, like Doom pronouncing Judgment.

"But your husband?" I insisted. "It was cruel, I know, but I wanted to get at something. 'Wouldn't you like to have your husband with you now?'"

"No," she said quickly. "The Germans are still in France."

"So you are satisfied that he shall remain where he is?"

"If he must remain until the Germans are beaten. I would not have him back before that, even if I could."

The lady spoke as though inspired. Her eyes burned brightly, almost with fanaticism. To her and she is an average Frenchwoman—the war is a Holy War, and to discuss peace with her on any terms other than the complete defeat of the Germans, is an insult. She is about 40 years old and there are no children. Her husband is her one great interest in life and should he die she would have to go out in the world and earn her own living. The couple have a costly furnished apartment but at most not more than a thousand or so dollars in the bank. There is no life insurance, at any rate the death of her husband would mean the breaking up of her home and the necessity of earning her livelihood.

I relate these facts because the women of France have always exercised great influence on the country's history and because one often hears the remark:

"The Government and the army may be willing to continue a long drawn out war, and they may be perfectly able to do so from the point of view of men and money. But what about the women?"

The answer may be read above. The women of France have themselves under a sort of self-imposed discipline no less rigid than that which the men folks are subject to at the front. They are part of the nation's sacred trust as much as the men and they will see the war through.

It must be stated here that the government is doing its share aiding the army's women-folk. Each wife gets 25 cents a day and more if she has young children. Of course if the husband's salary at the start of the war was above a certain figure (about $600 a year) the wife is supposed not to need this allotment. The French lady quoted above gets no allowance, for example, though her husband was earning when he left to join the colors only about $50 a month. She is compelled to live on her capital now which, thanks to years of thrift, is ample to see her through.

French effort for the past year has been universal. It had to be if the Germans were to be held in check, for most of German preparedness backed by 70,000,000 of people fell on France with her democratic unpreparedness and her mere forty million. And it was largely due to the women of the land that the French have been able to accomplish so much against her powerful enemy during the past 12 months.

At the front and throughout the army discipline is very strict, largely, it is true, because the individual French soldier chooses to have it so. I have seen a Prince of one of the oldest and richest families in all Europe stand at rigid attention for 20 minutes while a major was delivering a little lecture on army operations, the major being the son of a village school-teacher. You say he did perfectly right and of course all agree that he did. He knew it himself and that is why he did it, which is precisely the point. Prince of a noble family he was not above doing his duty scrupulously, standing straight as a ramrod when any sort of a salute might have answered considering the circumstances.

This discipline is universal in France and being in France it is one of the wonders of the war, for perhaps in no other country does the individual demand more personal freedom. This does not preclude, however, a spirit of comradeship between officers and men, for perhaps this exists in France to a greater extent than in any other army in the world, certainly more than in the American army. The idea is, neither men nor officers take advantage of it all working for the thing: the defeat of their old enemy Germany.

Among civilians and especially among the women there is the same spirit. Duchesses, countesses, and millionaires work hard in hand with the humblest and poorest women of France. Mme. Viviani, wife of the prime minister, is taking care of scores of babies so their poor mothers can earn a living. Mme. Poincaré, wife of the President of the Republic is at the head of the French Red cross and spends the days visiting the sick and wounded. And so it goes.

Glimpses of Married Life

By Mrs. Eva Leonard

"Where she could have gone in the few seconds it took me to slip on my kimono and slippers is beyond me." Olive sat on Jo Parsons' porch relating her exciting experience with the ghostly visitor who tried to frighten her in to giving up marrying a doctor.

"Do you know my theory?" I asked. "I think the woman has a hiding place near there where she secretes herself to watch a husband. She fled to that and watched the searchers in their quest of her."

"It looks reasonable," mused Olive. "After we quieted down and went to bed she crept out and hoped she got under cover before the terrible thunder storm came up. I'd hate to think of any human being abroad in that."

"Here comes Roger," exclaimed Jo. "Stay and have dinner with us, Olive, and tell him about your ghost. He's so hard headed I would like to know his opinion. I'll run and dish the dinner." Jo disappeared, waving her hand at her husband as he came up the walk.

"How are you, Miss Dunn?" Parsons extended his hand as he came up on the porch. That thunder storm last night washed the air and cooled his hat on a rack in the hall and seated himself in the rocker vacated by his wife.

"There's quite an excitement in town," he began, leaning back luxuriously and crossing his knees. "I did not know Fairport ever indulged in excitement." Olive swayed softly back and forth in the porch swing.

"Well, a genuine ghost would stir most any place. Fairport is alive enough to get a thrill over that."

"A ghost?"

"Tell me about it," Olive sat up alert.

Parsons stared a moment in surprise at her sudden interest.

"Yes, a ghost; the real article this time. Old Gorsley—you know of our hermit who lives in a cave by the river, don't you? He flees human beings as he would the plague," Olive nodded. "Well, he has been jarred out of his seclusion by a visit from a spirit."

"When?" breathed Olive.

"Last night, in that terrible storm. I don't know why ghosts should mind a ducking, but I had always supposed they kept their beds in storms." Parsons chuckled. "Today old Gorsley came into town and asked the marshal if anyone was missing. The comfortable old soul began to feel himself to see if he was all there, while Gorsley went and screaming accompanied by a knock-knock on his door. It was a terrible thing, fifty years; but on such a night he looked out of his peephole of a window and a ghostly figure was at the door. He opened his door and beseeching him to open his door, Gorsley covered his face with his hands and rushed away to hide in his bed, thinking his hour had come. The knocking continued some minutes, accompanied by the crying. Then all was still. The old fellow stooped again to his window and saw the figure going off through the woods toward the river. When he thought the thing over it occurred to him that ghosts could not enter closed doors, and he began to be afraid he had refused to give a human being shelter in a storm. The marshal assured him our population was intact, as far as he knew, and the old fellow ambled away comforted. He's a kind-hearted old curmudgeon."

"Dinner is served," said Mrs. Parsons, appearing in the door. "We have peas from our own garden for the first time today. I'm glad you're here to enjoy them, Olive."

Heart and Home Problems

Letters May Be Addressed To Mrs. Thompson, in Care of The Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl twenty years old, and have had several boy friends, some of whom still come to see me, and some who have apparently forgotten me. Several months ago I met a young man who made a very good impression on me. In fact, for a time I thought I was finally in love. This man is very proper and would not think of doing anything which is not in the book of etiquette. At first I thought that when we became better acquainted he would drop a great deal of his formality, but he has not. In the early part of our acquaintance he took me to dinner and to the theater, and last Easter he sent me flowers. Since then the only thing he has done for me is to buy me a ten-cent dish of ice cream. I am not mercenary and I do not feel that it is up to a boy to take a girl somewhere once out of every three or four times he sees her, but I do feel indignant when a boy comes to see me time after time and doesn't take me anywhere. A few other boys have done the same thing and I have not resented it because they have had no money to spend on girls.

For some time I have been thinking of dropping this boy, because he doesn't do anything for me when he can just as well as not. Do you think I am wrong in feeling this way?

MARGARET.

I don't blame you for being indignant. A boy ought to take a girl somewhere once out of every three times he sees her.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a young man nineteen years old and I work in another city. For three years I have been in love with a girl here of my own age. We have gone together faithfully, neither of us keeping company with anyone else in all this time. The girl is broken-hearted to leave her. At times I think I will ask her to be my wife, or rather to become engaged to me and wait until I can afford to marry. But every time I get ready to say something my better judgment holds me back.

It would break my heart to have her learn to love someone else while I am away, and I know it will break her heart if I do. Girls look very attractive to me and although I have been so faithful to this girl for so long, something tells me that I may find some one I care just as much for where I am going. Would you advise me to make sure of the girl I am going with, or wait to see if I find someone else?

GUY.

A boy of nineteen is too young to become engaged. His ideals are sure to undergo rapid changes between the ages of twenty and twenty-five. The girl he will choose at twenty-five will be far different from the one of his choice at nineteen and twenty. If you and the girl are meant for one another there will be plenty of time to become engaged in a few years.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Do you think a boy who is between twenty-one and twenty-two years old is old enough to choose a partner for life? Especially when the girl in question is an older, nearly two years older. They have not gone together very much until lately, but the boy has always been interested in just this one girl. Don't you think the chances are that he would change his mind when he gets older? PESSIMIST.

The chances are that the boy has been worshipping an ideal and as he grows older and his interests change he will find that he wants an entirely different girl for his wife. I think he would be very foolish to become engaged.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have an individual rose vase that I would like to use, but I can't find anything that will look nice in it since roses are gone. Can you suggest anything?

MRS. K.

Poppies, cosmos, or any flower with a long stem looks well in an individual rose vase.

WOMAN WEDS MAN WHO SHOT HUSBAND

Ceremony is Solemnized at Jail in Denver—Husband Condemned to Hang.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]

Denver, Col., Aug. 10.—To the county jail here there comes every day a sweet faced little woman to see George A. Quinn, condemned murderer of her former husband. Quinn and the woman, Mrs. Nellie Coral Herbertson, were married recently that an innocent eight-months-old boy might have a name.

Quinn, in broad daylight last October, went to Herbertson's house with a shotgun and killed him.

Formerly a teamster and still a giant in physique, Quinn has ambitious plans for the little boy born to himself and Mrs. Herbertson.

"I want him to be a prize-fighter," proudly said the father, who is to be hanged next October. "Look how well built that kid is."

Mrs. Quinn, however, has other plans for the baby, Leo. "He is so well educated, because," she said, "a fellow without an education never has a chance."

Relatives are caring for mother and child.

The wedding ceremony in the warden's office was the most dramatic ever seen by officials here. With the shadows of the jail bars falling across Quinn's face and with the baby sleeping soundly in the arms of the bridesmaid, Justice Henry Bray pronounced the ritual. Mrs. Herbertson, her voice clear, repeated the words that bound her to the murderer of her husband, only faltering when the justice reached the words, "till death do us part." The thought of the hangman, however, was mitigated by the knowledge that her son is to face the future with a name, if only a murderer's. The ceremony finished, Quinn seized her in his arms and kissed her fervently before led back to his cell.

AFTERNOON GOWN

The model of this afternoon gown is of black taffeta. The skirt is medium width and gathered at the waist. On each side there is a plain gore, the front and back being gathered more fully than the gore at the sides. There are two deep folds at the bottom of the back and front gore. These are beaded with a frill about two inches deep. The sleeves and waist are in one. The latter is open with a V at the neck. The high standing collar gives it a chic touch. A black velvet toque completes the costume.

"I hope to be able to remove the public place," replied the rector, with a gravity which told of something vital beneath the apparent repartee. Mrs. Boyd, strolling past with Aunt Grace Sargent, paused to look at him fondly. "I shall set myself, with such strength as I may have, against the building of the proposed cathedral."

He had said it so quietly that it took the little group a full minute to comprehend. Jim Sargent looked with acute interest at the end of his cigar, and threw it overboard. Arly leaned slowly forward, and, resting her pliant chin on her closed hand, studied the rector earnestly. Gerald stroked his mustache contemplatively, and looked at the rector with growing admiration. By George, there was a sportsmanlike attitude! He'd have to take Rev. Smith Boyd down to the Papyrus club one day. All the trouble flew back into Gail's eyes. It was a stupendous thing Rev. Smith Boyd was proposing to relinquish! The rectorship of the most wonderful cathedral in the world! Mrs. Boyd looked startled for a moment. She had known of Ted's bright dreams about the new cathedral and the new rectory. He had planned his mother's apartments himself, and the last thing his eyes looked upon at night were the beautifully colored sketches on his walls.

"Don't be foolish, Boyd," protested Sargent, who had always felt a fatherly responsibility for the young rector. "It's a big ambition and a worthy ambition, to build that cathedral, and because you're offended with certain things the papers have said, about Clark and Chisholm in connection with the church, is no reason you should cut off your nose to spite your face."

"It is not the publication of these things which has determined me," returned the rector thoughtfully. "It has merely hastened my decision. To begin with, I acknowledge now that it was only a vague, artistic dream of mine that such a cathedral, by its very magnificence, would promote worship. That might have been the case when cathedrals were the only magnificent buildings erected, and when every rich and glittering thing was devoted to religion. A golden candlestick then became connected entirely with the service of the Almighty. Now, however, magnificence has no such significance. The splendor of a cathedral must enter into competition with the splendor of a statehouse, a museum or a hotel."

"You shouldn't switch that way, Boyd," remonstrated Sargent, showing his keen disappointment. "When you began to agitate for the cathedral you brought a lot of our members in who hadn't attended services in years. You stirred them up. You got them interested. They'll drop right off."

"I hope not," returned the rector earnestly. "I hope to reach them with a higher ambition, a higher pride, a higher vanity, if you like to put it that way. I wish them to take joy in establishing the most magnificent conditions for the poor which have ever been built. We have no right to the money which is to be paid us for the Vedder court property. We have no right to spend it in pomp. It belongs to the poor from whom we have taken it, and to the city which has made us rich by enhancing the value of our ground. I propose to build permanent and sanitary tenements, to house as many poor people as possible, and conduct them without a penny of profit above the cost of repairs and maintenance."

Gail bent upon him beaming eyes, and the delicate flush, which had been run to her cheeks, deepened. Was this the sort of tenements he had proposed to re-erect in Vedder court? Perhaps she had been hasty! Rev. Smith Boyd in turning slowly from one to the other of the little group, by way of establishing mental communication with them, rested for a moment in the beaming eyes of Gail, and smiled at her in affectionate recognition, then swept his glance on to his mother, where it lingered.

"You are perfectly correct," stated

Gerald Fosland, who, though sitting stiffly upright, had managed nevertheless to dispose one elbow where it touched gently the surface of Arly. "Market Square church is a much more dignified old place of worship than the ostentatious cathedral would ever be, and your project for spending the money has such strict justice at the bottom of it that it must prevail. But, I say, Doctor Boyd," and he gave his mustache a contemplative tug; "don't you think you should include a small margin of profit for the future extension of your idea?"

"That's glorious, Gerald!" approved Gail, and Arly, laughing, patted his hand.

"You're probably right," considered the rector, studying Fosland with a new interest. "I think we'll have to put you on the vestry."

"I'd be delighted, I'm sure," responded Gerald, in the courteous tone of one accepting an invitation to dinner.

"Do you hear what your son's planning to do?" called Jim Sargent to Mrs. Boyd. He was not quite reconciled. "He proposes to take that wonderful new rectory away from you."

The beautiful Mrs. Boyd merely dimpled.

"I am a trifle astonished," she confessed. "My son has been so extremely eager about it; but if he is, relinquishing the dream, it is because he wants something else very much more worth while. I entirely approve of his plan for the new tenements," and she did not understand why they all laughed at her. She did feel, however, that there was affection in the laughter, and she was quite content. Laughing with them, she walked on with Grace Sargent.

Gerald Fosland drew forward his chair.

"Do you know," he observed, "I should like very much to become a member of your vestry."

"I'm glad you are interested," returned the rector, and producing a pencil he drew a white advertising space towards him. "This is the plan of tenement I have in mind," and for the next half hour the five of them discussed tenement plans with great enthusiasm.

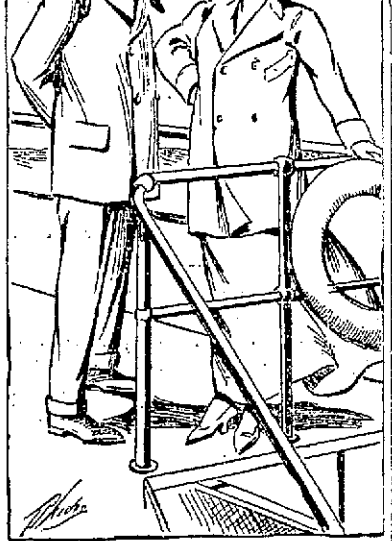

At the expiration of that time, Ted and Lucile and Dick and Marion came romping up, with the deliberate intention of creating a disturbance; and Gail and Rev. Smith Boyd, being thrown accidentally to the edge of that whirlpool, walked away for a rest.

"They tell me you're going abroad," observed the rector, looking down at her sadly, as they paused at her favorite rail space.

"Yes," she answered, quietly. "Father and mother are coming up next week, and she glanced up at the rector from under her curving lashes.

"There was a short space of silence. It was almost as if these two were weary."

"We shall miss you very much," he told her, in all sincerity. They were both looking out over the blue waves; he, tall, broad-shouldered, agile of limb; she, straight, lithe, graceful. Mrs. Boyd and Mrs. Sargent passed them admiringly, but went on by with a trace of sadness.

There Was a Silence. It Was as if These Two Were Weary.

"I'm sorry to leave," Gail replied. "I shall be very anxious to know how you are coming on with your new plan. I'm proud of you for it."

"Thank you," he returned.

They were talking mechanically. In them was an inexpressible sadness. They had come so near, and yet they were so far apart. Moreover, they knew that there was no chance of change. It was a matter of conscience, which came between them, and it was a divergence which would widen with the years. And yet they loved. They mutually knew it, and it was because of that love that they must stay apart.

CHAPTER XXIX.

A Vestry Meeting.

There was a strained atmosphere in the vestry meeting from the first. Every member present felt the tension from the moment old Joseph G. Clark walked in with Chisholm. They did not even nod to Rev. Smith Boyd, but took their seats solidly in their customary places at the table, Clark, shielding his eyes, as was his wont, against the light which streamed on him from the red robe of the Good Shepherd. The repression was apparent, too, in Rev. Smith Boyd, who rose to address his vestrymen as soon as the late-comers arrived.

"Gentlemen," said he, "I wish to speak to you as the treasury committee, rather than as vestrymen, for, it is in the former capacity which you always attend. I am advised that we have been paid for Vedder court."

Chisholm, to whom he directed a gaze of inquiry, nodded his head.

"It's in the Majestic," he stated. "I have plans for its investment, which I wish to lay before the committee."

"I shall lay my own before them at the same time," went on the rector.

"I wish, however, to preface these plans by the statement that I have, so far as I am concerned, relinquished all thought of building the new cathedral."

Nicholas Van Ploon, who had been much troubled of late, brightened and nodded his round head emphatically.

"That's what I say," he declared.

"The decision does not lay in your hands, Doctor Boyd," drawled a nasal voice with an unconcealed sneer in it. It was clean-shaven old Joseph G. Clark, who was not disturbed, in so much as the parting of one hair, by all the adverse criticism of him which had filled column upon column of the daily press for the past few days. "The rector has never, in the history of Market Square church, been given the control of its finances. He has invariably been hired to preach the gospel."

Sargent, Cunningham, Manning, and even Van Ploon looked at Clark in surprise. He was not given to open reproach. Chisholm manifested no astonishment. He sat quietly in his chair, his fingers idly drumming on the edge of the table, but his mutton-chop beard was pink from the reddening of the skin beneath.

"The present rector of Market Square church means to have a voice in its deliberations so long as he is the rector!" announced that young man emphatically, and Jim Sargent looked up at him with a jerk of his head. Rev. Smith Boyd was pale this afternoon, but there was a something shining through his pallor which made the face alive; and the something was not temper. Rufus Manning, clasping his silvery beard with a firm grip, smiled encouragingly at the tall young orator. "I have said that I have, so far as I am concerned, relinquished the building of the cathedral," the rector went on. "For this there are two reasons. The first is that its building will bring us farther away from the very purpose for which the church was founded; the worship of God with an humble and a contrite heart! I am ready to confess that I found, on rigid self-analysis, my leading motive in urging the building of the new cathedral to have been vanity. I am also ready to confess, on behalf of my congregation and vestry, that their leading motive was vanity!"

"You have no authority to speak for me," interrupted Chisholm, his mutton-chops now red.

"Splendor is no longer the exclusive property of religion," resumed the rector, paying no attention to the interruption. "If I thought, however, that the building of that cathedral would promote the spread of the gospel in a degree commensurate with the outlay, I would still be opposed to the erection of the building; for the money does not belong to us!"

"Go right on and develop our conscience," approved Manning, smiling up at the old walnut-beamed ceiling with its carved cherub brackets.

"The money belongs to Vedder court," declared the rector; "to the distorted moral cripples which Market Square church, through the accident of commerce, has taken under her wing. Gentlemen, in the recent revelations concerning the vast industrial interests of the world, I have seen the whole blackness of modern corporate methods; and Market Square church is a corporation! I wish to ask you, in how far the Market Square church has been awayed, in its commercial dealings, by moral considerations?"

He paused, and glanced from man to man of his vestry. Sargent and Manning, the former of whom knew his plans and the latter of whom had been waiting for them to mature, smiled at him in perfect accord. Nicholas Van Ploon sat quite placidly, with his hands folded over his creaseless vest. Willis Cunningham, stroking his sparse brown Vandike, looked uncomfortable, as if he had suddenly been introduced into a rude brawl; but his eye roved occasionally to Nicholas Van Ploon, who was two generations ahead of him in the acquisition of wealth, by the brilliant process of allowing property to increase in valuation. Chisholm glared.

"You'll not find any money which is not tainted," snapped Joseph G. Clark, who regarded money in a strictly impersonal light. "The very dollar you have in your pocket may have come direct from a brothel!"

"Or from Vedder court," retorted the rector. "We have brothers there, though we do not officially know it. We have saloons there; we have gambling rooms there; and from all these iniquities Market Square church reaps a profit! For the glory of God? I dare you, Joseph G. Clark, or W. T. Chisholm, to answer me that question in the affirmative! No decent man would conduct the business we do, for the reason that it would soil his soul as a gentleman; and it is a shameful thing that a gentleman should have finer ethics than a Christian church! In the beginning, I was a coward about this matter! It was because I wished to be rid of our responsibility in Vedder court that I first urged the conversion of that property into a cathedral. We cannot rid ourselves of the responsibility of Vedder court! If it were possible for a church to be sent to hell, Market Square church would be eternally damned if it took this added guilt upon it!"

"This talk is absurd," declared Chisholm. "The city has taken Vedder court away from us."

"Only the property," quickly corrected Rufus Manning, turning to Chisholm with sharpness in his deep blue eyes. "If you will remember, I told you this same thing before Doctor Boyd came to us. I have waited ever since his arrival for him to develop to this point, and I wish to announce myself as solidly supporting his views."

"Your own will not bear inspection!" charged Clark, turning to Manning with a scowl.

"I'll range up at the judgment seat with you!" flamed Manning. "We're both old enough to think about that!"

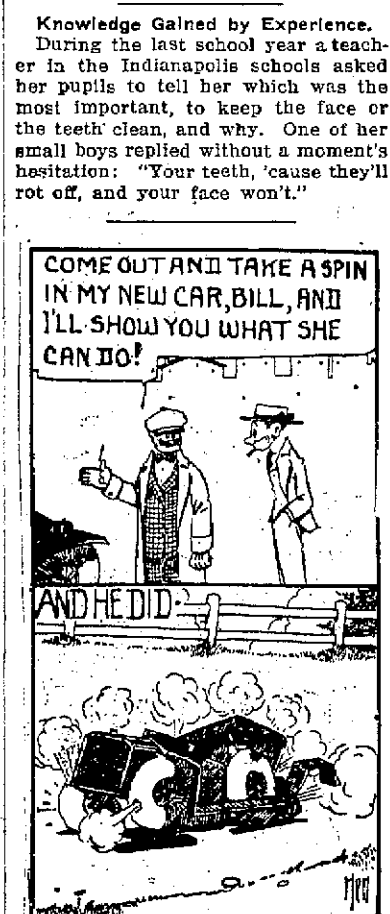

Joseph G. Clark jumped to his feet and, leaning across the table, shook a thin forefinger at Manning.

Knowledge Gained by Experience.

During the last school year a teacher in the Indianapolis schools asked her pupils to tell her which was the most important, to keep the face or the teeth clean, and why. One of her small boys replied without a moment's hesitation: "Your teeth, 'cause they'll rot off, and your face won't."

Dinner Stories

In one of the southern states the negroes are great patrons of a matrimonial agency. One ducky, anxious to find a wife for his son, went to this agency, who handed him his list of lady clients. Running through this the man came upon his own wife's name, entered as desirous of obtaining a husband between the ages of twenty-eight and thirty. Forgetting about his son, the ducky hurried home to announce his discovery to his wife. She was not at all disturbed.

"Yes," she said, "I done give him my name. I puts it down when you was so sick in de winter and de doctor says we must prepare for de worst."

Aunt Lindy had brought around her three grandchildren for her mistress to see. The three little darlings in calico smocks stood quivering in line while Lindy proudly surveyed them.

"What are their names, Lindy?" her mistress asked.

"Deys' names after flowers, ma'am. Ah name 'em de bigges' ones name Gladiola. De nex' ones, she name Heliotrope."

"Those are very pretty," her mistress said. "What is the littlest one named?"

"She's name Artichoke, ma'am."

"Now this is a little thing I did in Italy," said the artist. "I am told by people who seem to know that the jackass off in the corner is especially well drawn."

"Yes," said the critic, eying the figure closely. "You seem to have put a great deal of yourself in to it."

Transforming Clothesline Posts.

A suburban resident grew tired of the wooden clothesline posts in his back yard. He incased them in chicken wire netting and planted sprouts of honeysuckle around the posts. He then nailed a little bird house to the top of each. In a short time the honeysuckle had completely covered the unsightly posts and a pair of bluebirds built a nest in one of the houses. Many of this man's neighbors took up the idea, and honeysuckle vines and bird houses now make the clothesline posts of his locality a pride to their owners.—House and Garden.

The Grocer's Euphemism.

"Why is it that the berries at the bottom of your boxes are always so much smaller than those at the top?" asked Mrs. Newlywed.

"Ah, madam," said the grocer, "you don't put it quite correctly. You should ask why the berries at the top of the box are so much larger than those at the bottom."—Judge.

The Wasp.

It is said that the male wasp does not sting, but as the male and female wasps wear the same kind of polonaises and look as much alike as twins the only way to distinguish their sex is to catch one. If it stings it is a female; if not, it is a gentleman wasp.

MUD BALL BANISHED BY FED LEAGUE HEADS

Ed. Roubach's Latest Fooler Must Go to Discards, According to Orders Just Issued

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Chicago, Aug. 10.—Use of the "mud ball," successor to the emery ball, was prohibited in the Federal league on orders issued today from President Gilmore's office here. A penalty of $50 is provided for violation of the order. In addition, a ruling that the umpire must rub the gloss off all new balls, before putting them in play, is included.

The use of a sponge, wet handkerchief, or other article, to aid in moistening the balls, is also interdicted. Credit for discovering the mud ball has been given to Ed. Roubach of the Newark Federals, who is said to have used it successfully in a game against Chicago a few days ago. A little lump of wet mud stuck on the ball caused it to take a peculiar course, something after the fashion of the emery.

When the Athletics go to Jacksonville next March they may be permitted to play Sunday games. There was some talk of doing so in 1914, but it was found that the opposition would be too strong from certain quarters. According to the Jacksonville Times-Union, while it is against the state law of Florida to play Sunday games, the law is not effective on a government reservation. Black Point, near Jacksonville, is said to be available for Sunday games without any interference from the state authorities in case teams desire to take advantage of the fact.

MORRIS MILLER

With Herzog kicking in German, Olson protesting in Swedish and Mollwitz objecting in Hungarian, the umpires working in Cincinnati surely have their troubles.

The Giants are soon going to put into the game a real play ball pitcher, name George L. Kelly. Kelly is only nineteen, but Manager McGraw plans to use him regularly. He stands 6 feet 4 inches and is a nephew of the famous old-time ball player, Bill Lange. Last year Kelly played with the Victoria (B. C.) club of the North-western league, where he hit .337 and fielded .996.

Gandil is playing the best ball of his career at the present time. He is not only hitting well, but he is fielding in great form, and if he continues his present pace throughout the season he is pretty sure to be the leading first baseman of the league at the finish. The offensive strength of the Nationals is never on as high a plane as when Gandil is doing his share of the stick work. He is the one man on the team who has the run-producing proclivities which are so much needed. Chic is apt to clean up any time he faces the pitcher with men on the bases, and that is the sort of a baseman who is most valuable to his team.

Umpire Byron sings all the time during ball games, and all his words are set to the tune of "John Brown's Body." He ought to be doubled up with Hank O'Day and give the bull-throating duet from Carmen.

Steve O'Rourke, graduate of Holy Cross and former player in the old Eastern and New York State leagues, has been named as director of athletics at St. Mary's College at St. Mary's, Kansas, the position formerly held by Bill Quigley, now a National league umpire. O'Rourke has been coach at St. Thomas college in St. Paul.

Hitting safely in forty-nine consecutive games, as Jack Ness, Oakland first baseman, has done is an extraordinary feat, and we would not believe it; but still one may be pardoned for wondering whether the continuity might not have been broken earlier had the same batter been called on to face such pitchers as Rucker, Alexander, Mathewson, Mamour, Chenoweth, Doak or Wood, Faber, Coveleskie, Johnson, Caldwell and Weillman.

There are four instances where a player after a couple of years' playing in the major leagues, during which he proves himself a weak hitter, ever improves in this respect enough to be numbered among the good hitters in fact company. Wade Killifer, however, differs from this rule. Killifer went to the Washington Nationals in 1909, figuring in the deal which gave the Detroit club Jim Delehanty. He was used for utility purposes, but did not seem to be more than a very ordinary hitter. He drifted into the minors, where he played the outfield, and developed into an excellent hitter. That this was not a fluke is proved by the fact that Killifer has been one of the best hitters in the National league for the past two years. He is with the Cincinnati club and is one of its most valuable players.

Night tennis and good tennis weather practically all the year round is responsible for the fact that nearly all tennis champions, from the Pacific coast, racquet men say. McLoughlin, Griffin, Johnston, Strachan, and other stars all are graduates of the Golden Gate park many courts, lighted at night so persons who work in the day time can play there. Courts in the middle west and east are not used at night, consequently the western players get twice as much opportunity to play.

Hawaiian athletes are trying to get an American track team to make a tour of the far east. The idea appeals to many in the states and there is a likelihood that it will be done. The team would include Japan, China and the islands on its itinerary.

The possibilities of baseball are evinced in various ways. Freak plays are recorded in amateur and professional games that would be considered ridiculous if propounded at a fanning bee. In a recent game in the American league a player scored a run without a base hit, pass or fielding error. His ball reached second. A passed ball put him on third and another wild pitch sent him home.

"They say," says Jimmy Archer, "that ball players are not earning the big salaries they are getting. Well, I've been out there catching with two toe nails mashed off by a foul tip, my back smashed by another, and two fingers knocked out of joint. That ought to be worth a few dollars a week, anyway."

MEN line up for the Real Tobacco Chew because it's what they've been wanting right along whether they knew it or not.

And the ones who saw it first like to get together and watch the movement grow. That's why so much is heard about it.

A little chew of pure, rich, mellow tobacco—seasoned and sweetened just enough—cuts out so much of the grinding and spitting.

THE REAL TOBACCO CHEW IS NOW CUT TWO WAYS!! W-B CUT IS LONG SHRED, RIGHT CUT IS SHORT SHRED!!

Take less than one-quarter the old size chew. It will be more satisfying than a mouthful of ordinary tobacco. Just take a nibble of it until you find the strength chew that suits you, then see how easily and evenly the real tobacco taste comes, how it satisfies, how much less you have to spit, how few chews you take to be tobacco satisfied. That's why it is the Real Tobacco Chew. That's why it costs less in the end. The taste of pure, rich tobacco does not get covered up. An excess of licorice and sweetening makes you spit too much.

One small chew takes the place of two big chews of the old kind.

(Notice how the salt brings out the rich tobacco taste.)
